mouse c-Myb gene in human breast carcinomas. c-Myb is a member of the myb family of transcription factors and has been implicated in the regulation of cell growth and differentiation in embryonic myogenesis and in tumorigenesis. To determine the expression of c-Myb in breast cancer, we have used RNA slot blot and Northern blot analysis to determine the levels of c-Myb mRNA in a panel of human breast tumor cell lines, and have compared these with normal human breast tissues. c-Myb transcripts were found in breast carcinoma cell lines, including MCF7 and MDA-MB-231, and in normal, non-tumorigenic human breast epithelial cells. There was no difference between the levels of c-Myb mRNA in the normal breast tissues of patients with and without breast cancer. High levels of c-Myb mRNA in MCF7 and MDA-MB-231 cells were associated with low levels of c-Myb protein. In vivo inhibition of Myb in MCF7 breast cancer cell xenografts produced significant reductions in tumor volume and growth rate. These results indicate that the expression of c-Myb is increased in breast cancer cells, and that the gene is thus a candidate for a new oncogene associated with 3da54e8ca3
